Got Soup?

During the cold winter months why not try making some soup? Soups are full of vegetables and broth are high in antioxidants, vitamins and minerals, and let's face it...they really hit the spot on cold days. My mom used to make "Stone Soup". If you haven't heard the story, please look it up on Google. She would announce she was making stone soup that day and my brothers and I would get excited. You see, she made it into a game! We would go out and find the perfect "stone" for the soup (if you do this, make sure the stone is big enough to see when it is served). She would wash it and put it in a pot with boiling water. She would tell the story of the weary travelers and she would pretend to "taste" the soup (at first just water) and we would be the "village people" – not to be confused with the musical group. When she would say the soup was missing something, we would run to the refrigerator and pull out items, one at a time to add to the soup. She would have some vegetables already cut up and some leftovers as well for us to easily grab. Out came the carrots, potatoes, onions, left over green beans and chicken/beef from the night before. We would go to the cupboard and pull out spices and bouillon and she would let us add them to the soup. We would taste it as we went and we took turns adding the items until it tasted "just right". Dinner always seemed a little more "festive" on stone soup night. We were proud of our contributions and mom got to use up leftovers without any complaints from us! Oh, and whomever got the "stone" in their soup didn't have to do dishes for a week!
